Comments:

"Douglas Lochhead requested a sofa in his office for his afternoon naps. 'You, sir, shall have a divan' said his boss, Robertson Davies ... He worked closely with Master Davies to establish two special collections: Canadian literature in English and 19th century bibliography ...When he wasn't teaching, Lochhead loved to examine the world around him and describe what he saw in verse. He was a scholar-librarian, who published more than 30 poetry collections. His first book came out in 1959, and the final one was published 50 years later, when the author was 86."
